We have never been guests, but have always been thrown in when our host was going out. We speak about such trifles as could interest anybody, and we make up little chaffs on the backs of our hosts to amuse them. The consequence is, that we had the conversation in the most unbroken order, and this is usually more amusing than the more polished conversation at ordinary parties. How to avoid the Breakdown. We have broken through, one way or another, more pleasant topics than first come into our minds, and we have tried to make others feel at their ease, and draw them out, by doing so.
